About the Conference

Anyone who has lost a parent, child, spouse, sibling, or beloved pet knows that legitimizing the complex and often taboo emotions one feels when a loss occurs is a difficult and rocky journey. "How to Do Good Grief" will nurture a deeper understanding of death and dying, helping participants to better cope with the hardship of losing a loved one. Conference attendees will be guided in examining unique ways of remembering and honoring people who have died.

Conference Presenters

Todd Hochberg is a documentary photographer who has worked in conjunction with hospitals and hospices, and directly with individuals, making documentary photographs and legacy videos for families struggling with the death of a loved one. The images and videos serve as touchstones for feelings and memories tied to deep, significant relationships and spiritual connections. His bereavement photographs, for which he has received many international awards, are part of a number of permanent collections.

Mary Rondeau Westra had always considered herself a religious and faithful person, but after the loss of her twenty-four-year-old son Peter in 2001, she realized how little she actually knew about being spiritual. Hailing from House of Hope Presbyterian Church in St. Paul, Minnesota, Mary will share how she came to understand, through grief, what it means to be a member of a congregation, to walk with God, to love and to hope again, and to be compassionate toward others.

Dr. John Boyle has been an ordained member of the clergy for more than fifty years. He has been a parish pastor, hospital chaplain, pastoral counselor, and seminary professor. Through his Grief Groups, Dr. Boyle has been instrumental in helping individuals cope with the grieving process by "moving from preoccupation to periphery," making room for something new.

Maureen Garvey and Mary Jo Hubick are pastoral counselors on the staff of the Lorene Replogle Counseling Center. In addition to seeing couples and individual clients, they have assisted Dr. Boyle in leading the Counseling Center's Grief Groups. Their combined years of experience with group participants has provided them with a rich wisdom of coping with death and loss.
